

A ticket where a tow doesn't fit.

One tap prints a ticket at the car, for a first offense or a property that won't allow tows. Whoever parked sees the photos, then pays or appeals.

BEFORE PARKVA

The only real consequence is a tow.

A property that limits towing says no to you.

Paper tickets, each amount written by hand.

Nobody chases the unpaid ones.

Checks in the mail, and a ledger by hand.

WITH PARKVA

A warning, a ticket, then a tow if the property wants one.

It can say yes to tickets, with no tows at all.

One fine per violation, set ahead of time.

Reminders go out on their own, and unpaid plates are flagged.

Paid from the driver's phone, with no invoice to send.

THE MATH

Tickets a night	10
Nights a year	365
Average fine	$40
Paid	40 in 100

$58,400

a year, from 10 tickets a night

An example, not a forecast: what drivers pay, before fees, refunds, or any split you agree to. Fines are set with each property, within local law.

WHY PROPERTY MANAGERS SAY YES

Residents keep their cars: a first offense costs a ticket, not a trip to the tow yard.

- Find it.
From the vehicle, Parkva Patrol checks every plate against the property's permits and guest passes. On foot, one photo of the plate does the same.
- Print it.
The ticket prints from the printer in the patrol vehicle or on the officer's belt, with your company's name and a code to pay.
- Paid by phone.
The code opens photos of their car, then Apple Pay, Google Pay, or a card, with nothing to download.
- Settled.
Payments go to your company's own Stripe account, under your name. Where you agree on a split with a property, it divides at payment.

AFTER THE TICKET

REMINDERS

Nobody has to chase it. Email and text reminders go out 2 days before the due date, then 3 and 10 days after, until it's paid or appealed.

UNPAID

Flagged on your next patrol. At 14 days past due, by default, the plate joins your hotlist, and its next ticket prints a final warning.

APEALS

An appeal stops the clock. The driver appeals with photos, within 48 hours by default. The property manager decides; a denial must say why.

DISPUTES

A record that holds up. Photos, plate, rule, fine, print, and payment on one timeline, there when a dispute comes.
